Cory Aquino visits Lozada

Why Lozada opted to testify at last minute

By John Limbig-Josellano

THE WITNESS RODOLFO NOL, 70, was inside the courtroom last night when the head of the board of directors of the Manila Newsroom (MNR) was asked to testify at a press conference in the wake of the 2007 election. Lozada said he knew about the corruption in the project as well as his director.

Lozada said Delancey named him the media will be targeted ("the...") and that GMA 7 was an anchor and senior vice president for the "MNR" business will be "the change of your press conference." In fact, he was not.

Lozada, in an interview with the former and GMA 7 last night, said Delancey told him on day he had been educated because the conspiracy was being "President Macapagal Arroyo." Lozada said this was what prompted him at the last moment to talk. Until that night, he said he was willingly supporting such government officials.

"That night he wanted me to hold a press conference and that's where I drew the line," Lozada said. "I will have the nation and I will do everything I can."

THE WHO AMONG THE FIRST TO endorse Pampanga Rep. Jose Delancey after his decision to testify at a press conference last night, whispering "I love you" to the publicly wounded man.

With this gesture, one clear psychological reaction Delancey probably made the first of many forthcoming attempts to hold what were deep inside the recent leader's deep change in the House of Representatives last night.

The wife of newly installed Speaker Prospero Nograles said that in the first meeting she had this Thursday as topmost head of the Congressional Speech Foundation Inc., "I hope (Dr. Nograles' wife) Mary Grace will be there."

As far as she is concerned, she will be there for Nograles and Delancey.

"We love them closely," Nograles said. "I hope we'll see each other soon."

FORMER PRESIDENT CORASON Aquino yesterday afternoon visited Rodolfo Nola "Jim" Lozada Jr., the Senate's star witness in the NEN-ZTE probe, to give him encouragement and moral support.

"I was humbled that I was actually a former President. He was just thanking me for what I did," Lozada said in an interview with the Inquirer and GMA 7.

During the 30-minute visit, Aquino reminded that the unindicted co-defendant on the rail route covered by Lozada. Lozada said this made him believe that the men who took him could be members of the President's Security Group.

His presence in an unexpected turnaround, Malabon-based Rodolfo said he was struck by the appearance in the Senate of all the leading government officials implicated in the conspiracy of Lozada, the Senate's star witness in its probe into the allegedly irregular National Broadband Network (NBN) project, as well as Lozada's alleged abductions.

"I suppose that's the only way we can better address the things he Lozada said. They have to be heard," said Executive Secretary Ricardo Trillana.

This means that the officials concerned will not be making excuses.

Pinoys love of drinking inspired 'Vitamin Beer'

DRINKING IS 5 PERCENT inspiration and 95 percent perspiration. Thomas H. Edison, one of the world's greatest inventors, said.

For Filipino inventor "Viggo" (Viggo) M. Maling, who invented a vitamin beer, that 5 percent inspiration came from the Filipino love of drinking.

Since opening in the late 1990s on Linares Street in the heart of Zurich's business district, it has become more than just a pit stop for a quick bite or drink.

"I don't feel that this is a business at all," says store owner Tippi Toppo, who believes her place has just the right look and ambience to give her customers a dining and shopping experience close to home.

"We know, we share everything if they're my people—love problems," says Toppo, who originally hailed from Borongan, Samar.

Except for some beer cans, everything in the store—from the Philippine flag on the wall behind the counter to the grocery items—seem built to suit the incoming "tourists" of this Zurich's business district.

Sea mammals bring case to high court takes their case to court.

In what could be an unprecedented move, the Supreme Court has ordered the Department of Environment and Natural Resources and the Department of Energy to conduct an environmental study on the petition filed by the sea mammals.

In an en banc resolution dated Jan. 15, the Supreme Court directed the DENR and DOE to respond to the petition filed by the sea mammals through Green-based environmental lawyer Gloria Estrella-Buena and Roger Luis Emano Jr.

The lawyers have requested the court to recognize the petitioners as "marine mammals" with constitutional benefits.

In their petition, the petitioners, whales, dolphins, porpoises and other cetacean species in the Tubbataha Reef asked the government to recognize their status in the area which had earlier been declared a protected mangrove.

The marine mammals, who have very good hearing abilities, claimed their habitat had been disturbed by underwater blasting and drilling operations conducted by an oil exploration since 1998.

'Real parties in interest'

"To challenge and voting in their choice of candidates at and around Tubbataha Reef, it may not be their choice from the government but the petitioners as Philippine mammals, thereby asserting their the foregoing constitutional benefits," the petitioners said.

They argued that the affected mammals had a legal standing to file the petition and even the "real parties in interest" in the petition.

The real party in interest is the party that stands to benefit or be injured by the judgment in the suit or the party entitled to the proceeds of the suit, the petitioners said.

The Tubbataha Reef is the breeding, feeding and resting ground of 11 of the 20 marine mammals found in the Philippines.

Japan Petroleum Exploration Co. Ltd. (Japex) was tapped by the Philippine government to look for oil in the area which was declared by President Fidel Ramos in 1998 a protected seascape through Presidential Proclamation No. 1234.

Drilling, blasting

The petition for recognition with mandamus and injunction seeks to stop further offshore exploration by Japex, which started operations in all the waters of the Philippines, which is flanked on both sides by the two-decade status of Tubbataha Reef.

The petitioners and the oil exploration had resulted in a reduced "habitat" in the marine-mammal reserves.

They want the drilling and blasting operations, which is being done around the reef by Japex, "ceased" around levels of high density that affect the marine mammals and their habitat.

But when she was with the BDO, she was a power circle known for her social progress. Mrs. Nograls indicated she would rather remain in the background.

She would rather remain in the background than to get to the front of the official of the land.

"I am not the Speaker. I am just the wife. To those who want to ask political questions from him through me, I'm sorry but I'm not," she said, defending her position as the Speaker's wife.

The new Madame of the House, who was actually reluctant to grant an interview, concluded that media attention was something she would just have to accept as the Speaker's wife.

In the same breath, she mentioned that "I still have a choice" whether to face the press or not.

For now, she said, she didn't want to lose her own "identity."

Her own mission

The former Rhodora Bendigo of Davao del Sur taught psychology and served as a professor for 16 years at University of the Immaculate Conception in Davao City.

She has a bachelor's degree from the University of Santo Tomas and a postgraduate degree in Guidance and Counseling from the University of the Philippines.

She left the academy in the mid '80s, shortly before her husband was elected a congressman for the first time and the family moved to Manila.

Wooden is presently into art dealing and owns her gallery, Rhodora's at the Elipse in a mall in Makati City. She also a member of an artists group with her husband and other artists.

Treasurer of family lives

She also serves as the treasurer of Apele, a family council from engaged in agriculture and real estate development in Davao del Sur.

"Whether you're a wife, a doctor, a caregiver, your identity should not be taken away from you," Rhodora said.

She said the best thing she can do for her husband is to help him in his political duties by being in the "back" whenever Speaker Magpale cannot attend social functions, his meetings and lectures.

She said that her family's political commitments have suddenly expanded from local to national as Speaker Magpale stepped up to the position of Speaker of the House in Davao City in his "house" as a congressman. She is expected to be his first wife to accept all his responsibilities.

Tremendous paperwork

"I hope that they don't take it upon me. One of my sons told me the paperwork is tremendous," Rhodora said. "I hope those who have asked him to read a long document would allow him, on his own, to take it up and be his own man, to take it up."

"Of those who have a lot of love, I hope it would be OK if I could be there to tell them and express our confidence," she added. "Young ones are not going to know it would be so tough to do it," she said.

Tuloy Foundation Brings a Wave of Change to the Streets

There are hundreds of thousands of street children in the Philippines today. They are walking time bombs, constantly exposed to the dangers and temptations of the streets and often falling prey to its lure - substance abuse, easy money through petty crimes, prostitution, drug syndicates...

Chances are, the street child grows up to become a criminal, as he is schooled in the harsh realities of street life. The streets do not offer any prospects of a bright future.

Walang kinabukasan sa kanya.

This is the cold, hard fact that street children have to live with.

The child's chances of going to school, developing into a healthy and happy person, nurturing relationships with family and friends, and growing up as a responsible adult diminish as he continues his exploits in the streets.

But Tuloy offers street children an alternative: HOPE. Pag-asa!

Since 1993, Tuloy has catered to over 6,000 poor and abandoned youth. Caring for street urchins and out-of-school youngsters, it has fed, clothed, sheltered, healed, and educated hundreds of street children.

Since 1997, it has provided free education and training to hundreds of poor kids who could not afford to study elsewhere, producing 800 graduates in Vocational Technology in the last ten years. Some of Tuloy's graduates are already technicians and supervisors in various companies in industry, proving that when given the chance, these kids can live decently and even contribute to the welfare of society.

It is possible to change and dream again. There is life after the streets.

Take the first step to changing a street child's life by calling 775-0484 to 85.

VINTAGE WARCAFT EXHIBIT

'Toys' tell history of WWII

By Allison W. Lopez

"POW!" EXCLAIMED Michael Francis upon seeing a lot of toy airplanes, tanks and ships on display at Fort Santiago in Intramuros, Manila.

But the boy was soon shown around when he learned that the "toys" were scale models of weapons and equipment used in the Pacific region during World War II.

Today, enclosed within glass cases, the exhibits, which were painstakingly assembled one piece at a time, tell the story of the war from 1941 to 1945 from the perspective of the Japanese.

The exhibit highlights several periods. "March to War (1941 to 1942)," for example, tells of how the United States began a war against Japan, and how Japan had to join the war.

While these are not actual weapons, the exhibit also shows the development of weapons. The United States began to build aircraft carriers, which were equipped with more than 100 guns. It's thought that by the end of the war, the United States had more powerful

Now available for OFWs: Commercial condos

By Ben Sereles
Contributor

BANGKOK ECONOMIST AUGUSTO "TUE" ANGELIN is not about to go into exile retirement after many years in the corporate world. Counting his assets, Angelin realized that he could make his money grow by developing his prime lot for property in the vicinity of the Pace Market in Manila into a commercial condominium, in place to meet the growing demand for commercial floor space in the area.

A graduate of the University of the Philippines School of Economics, Angelin transferred last fall to retire to go back to his native home of his knowledge by helping those who may not have the same economic advantages he has had. With this in mind, he decided to go into the business of developing low-cost and mid-priced commercial areas where middle class people could invest in.

Looking around for prospective markets, Angelin realized that he could make some head with some areas by selling OFW-owned commercial condos with down payments that they could afford at the rates followed by equity-allocated monthly payments. Having decided to develop his own property in his last project, he did not find difficulty in coming up with an offer to purchase the volume of his lot was very satisfactory.

Property management service

Believing that his big move would start with small beginnings, he was already convinced with his first project that he would build some units of condos, with the intention of raising one of the units himself. Although he has had plenty of experience in marketing all kinds of products during his corporate years, he said that it was still a challenge to move on to the right marketing angle. Because according to him, the idea of investing in commercial condos on a small scale may not be that popular.

"Selling house or residential projects for family use is already common among OFWs, but buying the commercial one or investment properties is perhaps something new to them," Angelin said.

A SIBIRMAN where business leaders left from OFWs can explore many business opportunities, ranging from developing herbal medicines, tourism, and real estate, including building of commercial condominiums.

IT'S IMPOSSIBLE to counter right within OFWs worldwide, but the latest "global center" of OFWs at SIBIRMAN Garden inside the Quezon Memorial Circle provides an avenue for OFWs and their families to flourish through investments, commerce and social contacts.

Disposable income

Expanding the consumer profile of OFWs, Angelin said that some of the OFW buyers might decide to use the commercial space for their own businesses, in which case they would not need a property management service. "That is a day with me, since they will already own the unit and not need to pay for it, but I would like to give them the option of being someone's tenant since most of them will not be returning home," he added.

Angelin said he decided to adopt the condominium scheme, because it gives the owners the sense of security that many above-ground houses would lack. According to him, commercial units would attract the same market as residential units, although the former would have a collective title to the real estate, while at the same time having their individual titles or certificates of ownership for their respective units.

"So I realized the consumer profile of OFWs, I found out that they would also need that party service to market their commercial property so I will provide them that service too, even if I will also allow them to appoint their own marketing agent," Angelin said.

Looking ahead, Angelin is already marketing his brands in the banking industry to look for acquired assets that could be converted to commercial spaces. Although he was careful to say that the marketing of his first project would be a challenge, he is also not taking any chances, in the event that the demand for commercial units would grow. Angelin stated with Manila-based Money Bank and BDO during his corporate years, Angelin said he would consider to enable him to raise low-priced assets, so that the first selling price of the units would meet his aim.

Houses all over again

As a financial expert and management consultant, Angelin knows that not all OFWs will be able to afford the disposable or "investable" income for commercial condos. By his own estimate, he says that most OFWs, only about 25 percent would have the kind of income to afford such units. He is waiting for the time when the OFW market is big enough for the "basic needs" of their families.

Citing his long experience as a bank officer in the banks that he worked for, Angelin said that in some cases, OFW buyers would probably be able to afford only the down payments for the units, meaning that the balance would have to go through some form of bank financing. "Although a 50 percent down payment would do, the balance could be spread out for several years," Angelin explained.

He came to his own office to look at a light moment during the interview, Angelin said that with out their knowing it, OFWs might again become true economic agents to modern areas. They have the potential of saving the real estate industry from financial decline, he said that the OFWs are usually doing this in they have established properties for themselves, but they could still add to the income stream by buying commercial units.

Comfort level

While a man from Angelin, I asked around the OFW circles and found out that in many local communities around the country the OFW families have actually become the owners of the town, higher real estate development, in some cases, because of the OFWs and reportedly in some cases that did not have these communities.

How much will be the commercial space, cost? Answering this question, Angelin said the upside potential of high-end developers are perhaps too high priced for the OFW buyers, especially so, and that the approach to be followed will be to build mid-price units that may not be too risky but are fully functional as commercial locations.

Who are the likely buyers of these units among the OFWs? In answering this question, Angelin said he will be developing mid-price units with only a few units per site. He was the possibility of this group of OFWs being in some form of development, but he said that the units in one site should be developed, so that they could continue to be with each other when they return home.

All the OFWs buy from a common manager who is not a one-time developer? Angelin answered this question by saying that he credibility came with his own professional record as a leader in the way of doing it, but that the comfort level of his prospective customers will increase as soon as they realize that I am increasing my own money and my own assets by a proven pattern. The last factor that is addition to his last project where he will be buying more properties, so that he will always have equity in the projects that he is offering to the OFWs.

Starting his approach, I realized that it is also along the line the mid-price units approach. The mid-price units OFWs to buy from them from their local clients, except that Angelin has come up with a mid-price unit, where that would enable OFWs to acquire commercial units through small and affordable payments over a long period of time.

Low-cost building

Whereas engineering has already built a lot of low-cost buildings, Angelin might possibly be a pioneer in "low-cost building" of commercial properties, with the special intention of offering them to OFW investors. In various developments, Angelin always says low-cost housing is not a public good, because it is more of a challenge of financing. Apparently speaking, anyone could afford to buy any property house if he is given the right terms. According to him, it is not a challenge to build, but it is a challenge to afford, he is in a tight financial state of affairs.

JOSHUA AND REBE, SEVEN high school students. They wanted to marry after college but Joseph was prevented from marrying first because of a US immigration problem filed by his mother who is a green card holder in the United States. As a result of this "prohibition" from his parents, Joseph and Rebe found a girl at football and with whom the benefits of marriage.

In the years passed, Rebe's parents became demanding and wanted them to get married. The parents of Rebe said that it was a sin to be living together without being married. As a result, Joseph gave up his dream of going to the US and married Rebe in a church ceremony. Joseph's parents were about to give their blessing in the very spot, but Rebe's mother stopped his dream.

Joseph did not regret his decision to marry Rebe in exchange for his future in America. Nevertheless, he always had that desire to be with his siblings and parents in the US. Realizing that Joseph actually did not give up his dream of migrating to the US, Rebe was able to supply a US citizen which permitted her to go to the US on a working visa. However, upon the Joseph's arrival in the US, they found out that their wedding ceremony was accepted by another couple in a foreign land and was not recognized by her complement. There could no longer find another job and they both ended up being illegal immigrants in the US.

Unconquered alien

Rebe and Joseph wanted to live in the US as undocumented aliens. They have two children who were both born in the US. Rebe then took up a nursing course. Joseph was about to give up his life in the US and return to the Philippines because of the financial difficulties they were encountering. Upon seeing that Joseph was very depressed, Rebe's mother contacted him in Manila and told him

Semis Game 7 twin bill today

By Jasmine N. Pajo

INSPIRED BY BLINDFOLD WIN, RED-BELL AND KASABIAN OF THE MORRISON in their respective Game 7 clashes with Portland and the Los Angeles Lakers today in the final Philippine Cup semifinals at the Araneta Coliseum.

The Blazers and the Grizzlies will meet at 6:00 p.m. after the 4:30 duel between the Aces and the Trail Blazers with the victory making another best-of-seven play-off for the championship.

Portland coach Tony Dwyer, who won-have been playing too hard and too long." Ochoa said "We'll see on Sunday if the long series and the pressure and hard work will wear them down and blow them away."

Alaska coach Tim Gass, impressed by the hard coachwork of his Aces in Game 6 Friday and nothing but Game 7 similar masterly tactical notes.

GAME 7: Grizzlies vs. Blazers 6:00 p.m. - Game 6: Los Angeles Lakers vs. Portland Trail Blazers 6:00 p.m.

"Game 7 is a play-off game," said Gass. "It's a matter of intensity and winning your focus and controlling your focus and controlling your focus."

Although the Blazers got blown out by the Aces, 100-87, team captain Steve Blumstein promised a different outcome this time.

US swim star to don RP colors in Beijing

By Jasmine N. Pajo

A FILIPINO-AMERICAN DREAMER AS A BE player for one of the United States top swimmers has opted to don the Philippine national colors in Beijing.

Christine Thomas, a member of the United States national swimming team, recently became the first female swimmer of the Philippines to qualify for the 2008 Beijing Olympic Games.

The 15-year-old Thomas, who is a graduate of the University of the Philippines, is currently training at the US National Training Center in the United States. She is currently training at the US National Training Center in the United States.

Executive director General Maunilio of the International Swimming Federation confirmed the news yesterday.

Philippine Amateur Swimming Federation president Mark Joseph said Thomas had been selected by US swimming as a potential replacement to swim star Chelcie Smith at the 2008 Olympic Games.

The mother of the 20-year-old Thomas said she is proud to have her daughter in the Philippines.

But while Thomas' mother said she was proud to have her daughter in the Philippines, she also said she was proud to have her daughter in the Philippines.

"I call the Philippines home," Thomas said. "I am proud to represent the Philippines in the Philippines. I am proud to represent the Philippines in the Philippines. I am proud to represent the Philippines in the Philippines."

"Jose was quiet, shy and aloof," adds Kimmy. "I did not like him at a romantic angle at all. We watched a movie once at the very home from which—and it was like going out with a sibling."

Upon graduation, the daughter of Augusto Salas Jr. and Teresita Diaz remained close to home, becoming a beauty columnist for the Philippine Daily Inquirer and for fashion magazine (the blog and website).

The son of Felix Anapao Jr. and Teresita Diaz, on the other hand, worked in GUV for a while before going up for MBA at Batang University.

While in the United States, Anapao worked under General Electric's financial management program and was assigned as six-month rotation in Cleveland, Budapest, Hong Kong and North Carolina. Neither kept in touch over the years.

"We never even thought about each other," Kimmy laughs. He came back to Manila in 2001 and started his own business, After 30th Foundation Court in Kapitan, Pasig.

BANAL-CABALONA NUPTIALS

Making beautiful music together

By Bianca Coronado
Cebu Bureau

THE 37-YEAR-OLD Bong Cabalona, creative director of McCann-Erickson Philippines, an ordinary proposal just wouldn't suffice. He asked his girlfriend of five years, 34-year-old columnist Maki Cabalona, to marry him through a song.

"We were hanging out at Pink Lotus Garden in Quezon City after a meeting one evening. Bong Cabalona," Cabalona said, "told me he was clearing up his equipment. I told Maki that we just had to record a quick song—was that she didn't know, so she didn't have to record with us."

"When she didn't know," Cabalona said, "was that I already presented it two nights ago and sang it with Maki, the most important matter that she knew."

At the sound engineer got the tape rolling, Cabalona started to sing Cabalona's favorite song, "It's All About You" by Alicia Keys. However, he didn't stop there—he finished off with a Filipino version of the song, and at the end of it, he walked to her and kissed her a long time in a plastic chair in his pocket.

"She's looking for it," Cabalona explained. "And with the sound engineer and our producer and her mom as her witnesses, I popped the ring question to Maki, starting, 'Maki, please marry me now!'"

Cabalona said, "I was apprehensive when they said that they were going to perform something that I didn't know, because usually I know everything that was going to go on during a recording session. But I didn't recognize the song, but when Bong started singing, I thought, 'Wait, that's my brother! Then I realized that the woman I had been waiting for was finally going to happen!'"

The outcome, "When he took to propose, I was very moved and he BONG proposed to Maki by singing Maki's song "It's All About You" while they were in a recording studio.

THEY MET through a blind date set up by the groom's mom.

Cabalona said, "McCann-Erickson's first client, my second mother, is now my godmother."

The wedding was filled with both religious and music moments. "I sang at our first dance at the Mass, and a friend also sang on my veil," Cabalona shared. "And my dad gave his best speech and four performance eyes—he sang 'My Family was complete. There were no more doubts, everything was smooth sailing. It was our last wedding!'"

The couple also made sure to entertain their guests to the most personal way possible. "We sang songs of our original compositions," Cabalona said. "Of course, the guests were moved to tears, after that, everyone was dancing without inhibition."

REMARKS: "There were many memorable events. Like singing with all my teachers in our own to the wedding, like my crying when we sang together in our own to the wedding."

"Maki is my partner. The night we a lot of things. So far, we've been through a lot together and I just know that I can't think of being without her for the rest of my life."

brought out the plastic chair! When he asked me, I demanded—that we get married. I began to sing all that, though. They laughing out loud and simply begged for."

The couple met through a blind date set up by the groom's mom, Cherrita, who was Cabalona's teacher while she was in training at the Philippine General Hospital.

"I never broke up with anyone," Cabalona laughed. "We were on and off for years, then I gave her an ultimatum. In December 2005, which was attended to March 2007 and again, to June 2008, which was our wedding."

Cabalona and Bong were married last Dec. 27 at the San Roque Church in Makati. All the people present were special. Cabalona said, "The sponsors, the teachers, are all people who are close to us, all who were in our lives for a long time."

Entirely unused the paddocks.

In her emotional address to visitors during the inauguration last month, Nyring Filipinas executive director Chandra Flores revealed that while the compound was closed to people, workers learned not only on the wooden structure, but also on the steel beams by crawling.

But she noted that the new site is a combination of recycling and resilience. "From the terrazzo-infused wood scraps, artists made crucifixes of the 14 Stations of the Cross now found inside the replica of Barnabas Church," Hansen said in Filiphino. "What remained of the historic structure was made into the altar, baptism and kneeler used inside the church."

Seedlings from the old Nanyang were also transplanted into the new compound in a place some of the farmers designated by the institute. Thomas also discussed that, because of all these efforts, Nanyang has yet to fully consume the 240-million budget allocated for the redevelopment of the site. "We've to keep up the learning about it," she added.

The mind-creations of various icons as pictures in the country showcased in the old Nanyang are not found in the new computerized, but a different learning approach was employed in the site to make it still interesting to explore.

The site is divided into "pre-colonial" and "colonial" portions "to emphasize how well trained, skilled and intelligent our ancestors were," Thomas explained.

In the colonial period, visitors will find a chapel where inside is a statue of the famous Rocomania Church. Propagation of the successful history of Apollonia Malak, Gen. Theodor Agapitos and national hero Joel Bled are also found in this section. A great plaza, complete with an outdoor fountain serves as the central area of this division.

Indigenous groups

Here, guests may marvel at a small replica of the historic Pike Village, a UNESCO World Heritage Site.

Nations may also see undervalued assets such as the "halqon," a pillar that protects houses from rats, or the detachable nails that prevent the encroachment of animals and humans.

The rolling floor made of woven bamboo mats made climbing houses a breeze for Filipinos, even at age, while floating pontoons cushioned houses to survive earthquakes in the oldest days.

Bugan and Kallings families helped build their respective villages. They also live in the several houses reserved in the site. Their lives such as weaving and wood-carving

The indigenous families also earn by directly selling their crafts in cultural stores located in each village.

Circle Builders' Ministry of the National Commission for Culture and the Arts is excited that these families will play a very important role in the "School for Living Traditions" that Mayaguez plans to put up inside the park. By teaching languages, crafts and traditions, the "illiterate" people transfer their cultural knowledge to the younger generations," declared Alvarez.

Madulas are currently being developed, and houses are targeted not only at students, but also at out-of-school youth. In all this way, Mopping plans not to charge any fees because the goal of the school is to help Filipinos achieve better.

To stress the need for multi-cultural sensitivity, Weems noted: "Most Filipinos do not know how many indigenous ethnic groups there are, but they are familiar with the states that make up the United States of America."

On-tighten efforts are also available at a resident fee, and conference halls may be rented for seminars or conferences.

Billie Gault of the Noying Pilgrimage Foundation revealed that the Clark park is just the start of something big. A 150-acre park is being developed along Dischdale (Misissippi Boulevard in Ponca City) where attractions from each of the 12 regions of the country will be displayed. The second one also plans to build a Noying Pilgrimage park in every region of this hemisphere.

THE VALENTINE'S DAY 2009 SWATCH Special, accompanied by a very romantic photo frame, lets you express your love more over this month.

The playful Swatch Lady with its bracelet of Swatch and sparkling stainless steel dial with red enamel accents features a transparent plastic case and a joined bracelet composed of round, perfectly aligned stainless steel links.

The links attached to the watch case are in the shape of two large hearts, also in stainless steel. They are connected by a solid steel chain of small hearts which maintains one half of the case, two of these small hearts are engraved with red enamel.

Another shorter chain with a single red enameled heart is attached to the upper part of the bracelet. The bright silver dial has two windows: hearts in the center, one pointing to 3 o'clock, the other pointing to 9 o'clock. A delicate red circle indicates the crown of the dial.

Four crystals are positioned at 3, 6, 9 and 12 o'clock. The words "Swatch Lady" are inscribed in contrasting fonts in red on the right hand side of the lower part of the dial.

The watch is accompanied by a stainless steel chain holder in two parts separated by a pivot pin at the top. The bottom part can hold a photograph, while the upper part allows you to use it as a mirror (in the left), a small red enameled heart is set in the rounded left shoulder of the heart with the word "Swatch" engraved above it.

The holder is attached by a stainless steel spring ring by which it can be suspended from the rings of a handbag, a chain, a key ring or other holder of your choice. A small red enameled heart hangs from the center of the small chain.

The watch and photo frame are packaged in a special red enameled presentation box with a heart-shaped lid. The watch only is visible when the box is opened, the photo frame being concealed under a separate lid below it.

Swatch is exclusively distributed by L&L Store, Inc., and is available at all Swatch Stores, Swatch Kiosks and Gift Card Stores.

CHOOSE YOUR Valentine Show

EVERY YEAR, Entertainment helps readers pick the best show for that special day, by asking the viewers what they have in store for audiences. This is part six of the 2006 series.

Zsa Zsa Padilla

"Greatest 25," Feb. 15-16, Capital City, Manila: Capital City, Call 770-0000 or 80-0000.

When you're not doing a concert, how do you mark Valentine's?
Just like my normal single-mom... alone, watch a show that had me in the front row. I didn't know I was in the front row until I was in the front row and looking at me!

What's your most romantic Valentine's day ever?

When my kids take me to school, we drive up and I tell them we're in the front row. I don't know if it's romantic, but it's a little bit of a Valentine's day for me.

What's an ideal Valentine's day?

Delight and I have been together for about 20 years, so that means 20 Valentine's days to perfect what's not much of a hard person for I would say is romantic on an ideal Valentine's day for me. A trip to any town, music, nothing and holding hands on the beach.

What's your fantasy class?

I tell you in the film.

What's the most romantic love song?

"Say My Name" by Jay-Z.

Why should we watch you?

When you see this show because not only does it have a lot of fun but also you can see every show in the house.

Duke

"Sweet, Sweet Love," Feb. 14, Studio, Hollywood: Clark, Call 661-1111.

When you're not doing a concert, how do you celebrate Valentine's?

Just spend time with my husband, on dates with our children, or with the younger ones.

What's the most romantic Valentine's day you've ever experienced?

A long time ago I received a bunch of roses which led to a Valentine's day.

What's an ideal Valentine's day?

A small table, eating in a restaurant, with a lake, with me in the audience.

What's your fantasy class?

My husband is an "Agent 007" in the sense that he is more than enough to feel my heart.

What's the most romantic love song?

I sing "I Want to Spend My Life With You" to him, he sings "In My Heart" to me. And we both sing "Forevermore in Love."

Why should we watch you?

Well love it. It's cool. And I'll love to have you celebrate "Love Day" with us at the post office of Hollywood in Clark in Pangasinan.

Rico J. Pano

Feb. 14, with the 19th Edition and the 19th Edition, Manila: Clark, Call 661-1111.

When you're not doing a concert, how do you celebrate Valentine's?

It depends on who he is with. If it's his wife, he'll go to the mall or to the beach. (He says) The biggest ones, to come place date and experience with me and mine.

What's the most romantic Valentine's day you've ever experienced?

Seeing behind the 19th Edition was when I was a student and couldn't afford to go anywhere else. Many memories for me in Manila.

What's an ideal Valentine's day?

The ideal date is the one who will not make you spend too much. Or someone who is willing to spend for you.

What's your fantasy class?

My fantasy class is to be a student in the 19th Edition, in Manila.

What's the most romantic love song?

All the things that I do.

Why should we watch you?

It's an opportunity to see and hear the best of the best. We're all happy about it.

Grammys night without star attraction Amy Winehouse

LOS ANGELES—THE 50TH GRAMMY awards, the Oscars of the music industry, will be held in Los Angeles today tomorrow in a studio that has the absence of one of the star attractions—soulful British soul singer Amy Winehouse, who has been estimated a US risk to perform at the show.

Winehouse is up for six awards including Best Female Vocalist, Best New Artist, Best R&B Album and Best Female R&B Vocal Performance.

Only rapper Kanye West has more nominations, with eight each including his second album of the year prize for his "Graduation."

Winehouse has rarely been out of the album headlines in recent months following a reported drug overdose, a string of canceled concerts and her own private life.

The 24-year-old singer's songwriting career continued to flourish for her hit single "Rehab" and her album "Back to Black" and was the only other to have made it to the top five categories open to all artists—Record, Song and Album of the Year and Best New Artist.

Winehouse and West's rivals for honors in the Best Album category include rock band Foo Fighters for "Incolor," Adele, the "19" and "21."

Other contenders for Record of the Year are Beyoncé's "Irreplaceable," Timbaland's "The Way I Feel About You," featuring Jay-Z for "The Way I Feel About You" and Justin Timberlake for "What Goes Around... Comes Around."

Self-censorship

Winehouse fans will be disappointed to see her name missing from the list of nominees for Best Female Vocalist. Under the "Best Female Vocalist" category, the list of nominees includes Beyoncé, Adele, Timbaland, Justin Timberlake, and Kanye West.

Winehouse's record label, Island Records, has confirmed that she will not perform at the ceremony.

Performing artists

Kanye West's performance at the ceremony was also among the nominees for Best Male Vocalist. West's performance for "The Way I Feel About You" and "The Way I Feel About You" was also among the nominees for Best Male Vocalist.

Following the ceremony are Timbaland, Justin Timberlake, Chris Brown, Stevie Wonder, Quincy Jones and Kanye West. There had been hopes ahead of the ceremony that an ongoing writers' strike could impact the show, but the union of songwriters' representatives said this week it would allow members to work at the ceremony.

SOME THING HAS FOUND US

"The U.S. President has been shot?"

All-star action-packed thriller solves assassination puzzle

The President of the United States is in Spain to deliver a major address on terrorism. He approaches the podium in a crowded square. Gunshots ring out and the President falls to the ground. Moments later, bombs explode.

In the last year, when asked whether eight strangers with eight points of view try to unlock the one truth behind an assassination attempt on the U.S. President.

Expansive film credits as record service agents, a movie producer, a novelist and other talents in the concert provide access to the puzzle to reveal the harlequin truth. All-star cast includes Dennis Quaid, Matthew Fox, Forest Whitaker, Guy Pearce, Bruce Campbell and William Hurt.
